STANSBURY PROGRESS ASSOCIATION INCORPORATED

It's already July and with winter well and truly here, and the school holidays just around the corner, it's time for our Winter Craft Market and Town Wide Garage Sale, both being held on Saturday 15 July.

If you haven't already registered for the Town Garage Sale, you've still got a few days left to do so (last date for registration is 6 July). Visit the Information Centre or email tourism@stansburysa.com.au to collect a registration form and helpful hints and be part of the morning. If you have already picked up a registration form, please return it to the Information Centre – Monday to Friday – 9.30am to 4.00pm – by 6 July 2023.

The Winter Craft market will be open from 9am through to 12.30pm in the Stansbury Institute Main Hall, with the Lions Club providing Devonshire Tea from 9am to 12 noon in the Supper Room. This year, the Museum will be offering a sausage sizzle and hot soup outside the Institute throughout the morning. The Garage Sale will run from 9am and conclude at 1pm, with maps and information available from the Stansbury Institute from 8.45am.

The Stansbury Primary School students have been getting busy creating works of art to display throughout the Institute on the morning.

Thank you to everyone who is contributing to this event – this is our second year running the craft market and we are grateful to the stallholders, Stansbury Primary School, the Lions Club of Stansbury Dalrymple, and Stansbury Museum for coming on board and making it special.

LIONS CLUB OF STANBURY DALRYMPLE

In May we celebrated our 15th Anniversary since the Lions Club was officially chartered.

What has the Lions Club done for the local district, and other organisations in that time?

On reflection, it is interesting to see what has happened from all those donut and hot dog sales, as well as the catering, emergency assistance and other activities in and around the community.

Donations in excess of $160,000 have been distributed.

These are too numerous to individually list, but approximate amounts are as follows, with some of the recipients named but these are not inclusive.

$90,000 - Local organisations (CFS, RFDS, Elanora, Ambulance, SYP Hospital, schools, museum, institute, sporting groups etc)

$18,000 - Appeals (Fire, Flood, Cyclone, BlazeAid, etc)

$50,000 - Lions Funded Research projects (Childhood Cancer, Sight and Diabetes Research

STANSBURY PRIMARY SCHOOL NEWS

This term we have been exploring planets by integrating the thread through most learning areas. In art the children used new lego donated to the school through Good360 (nearly $800.00 worth) to create creatures that live on the planet they had chosen to research. It was wonderful to not only have an abundance of lego (children were given a box between two) but to have quality lego that supported their vision in coming to life.

The next step after designing their creature and a diorama of their planet was to create a movie using the stop motion app. For many using digital tools to support their art process was a first and even our younger students mastered this task successfully.

The children gained inspiration for their thinking through our visit while on school camp to the Lego Relic exhibition: A New World Rises created by Alex Towler and Jackson Harvey, winners of channel 9 Lego Masters in 2020.

The children were amazed by the miniature worlds created and in turn were super proud of their work.

STANSBURY MUSEUM

Rowena Smith

In my last article when discussing weighing and measuring equipment I mentioned a couple of examples of counter balances used for weighing that we had on display in the museum (the weighbridge for bags of wheat and household kitchen scales). I was remiss in not mentioning the beautifully crafted jeweller's scales for weighing gold and the delicate scales to measure the weight of diamonds that are on display. There is also a vintage egg scale that uses the weight lifting principle. The weight of the egg in an "egg cup" causes a marker to move and where it lands along a marked gauge indicates how much the egg weighs. Today you can buy very accurate digital egg weighing scales.

I also mentioned methods of keeping food cool and neglected to mention the earthenware butter cooler circa 1910 displayed in the main Stansbury history room. The design of porous earthenware double walls with water filled between them and holes at the base to allow air flow. The subsequent cooling by evaporation was a clever way of keeping butter cool. Our cooler is missing its saucer but is an elegant example of this technique of cooling. Interestingly this butter cooler is stamped W C Bennett Magill Pottery. William Charles Bennett was the son of Charles Bennett who originally founded Charles Bennett and Sons Pottery at Magill in the late 1800's. Interestingly, five generations of the Bennett family worked in the pottery business that now trades as Bennetts Magill Pottery Ltd and could definitely be described as a successful South Australian business able to move with the times.

While still on the theme No technology...How did they do it? The museum has an object that brought back many memories for me although I wasn't fortunate enough to have such an impressive set. It is an "Educational Picture Builder" made by D O Smith in Australia in the early 1950's. The wooden box has 4 metal trays each is filled with a selection of wooden backed rubber stamps that used to be stamped on an ink pad, pressed on paper and the design on the stamp was transferred to the paper. The stamps include animals, people, places, engineering and transport. Children could arrange these stamped impressions to create a picture and could even colour them in afterwards. You can imagine children having hours of creative fun with these. Sometimes teachers used this type of stamp to reward good work. A committee member of the Stansbury museum remembers larger stamps similar to these being stamped on brown paper covers of story books at school to indicate the subject matter e.g. a kangaroo stamp on a story about a kangaroo. Can any of you remember carving shapes on potatoes and dipping them in paint or ink to create prints? Now children have individual self inking plastic stamps and computer generated and printed colouring in pages, work sheets and books. Teachers tend to reward good work with much fancier stickers and other rewards. The materials used and methods to produce images have changed but result in the same enjoyment for children.

The museum has an extensive array of tools used by workers and handymen of yesteryear. They are displayed in the large implement shed at the rear of the old school and head teachers building. Something that is noticeable when looking at these is that unlike many modern tools they were not powered by electricity or by batteries. Another is that they are generally made of materials that are much heavier than modern day tools. Cast iron and wood have been replaced by steel and plastic. Muscle power by people accustomed to doing heavy manual work and who had strong hands, arms and legs allowed our forbears to use these heavier tools. They did things and made many things themselves that today are made easier by modern tools. A classic example is of an old Husqvana mincer that has a huge disc that is turned by a handle that creates the turning action that rotates the mincing blades. Some magnificent old drill presses are hand and foot operated and depend on several principles of physics to drill a hole in wood or steel as well as "man power".

Most people especially in the country had to be much more self reliant than we do today. We also tend to buy from shops or employ specialist services. Often they had no alternative but to make and mend.

Come to the museum and see how they did it with no technology.
